ABSTRACT:

The Canadian government and the European invasion forces together joined hands to conduct an investigation and experiment on the basis of evidence which was obtained and created a deep impact on the people. The experiment even made the future generation's heart explode, regarding the buried remains of humans those were not considered as one. When the Europeans set their foot, they were very strong and sure about what they wanted to implement in their lives. When the native children were born, they tend to abduct them and forced them into Christening and did force them for the language conversion. English schools were opened for the knowledge of Children which was proceeded through feeding them raw food, fixation of changing through baptising, several children for the sake of making their religion the highest to exist. The religious people always had their ways for pretending that they give fatal pleasure and consequences, but they never took responsibility for their actions and mistake. Once they rejected the temptation and fallen for salvation. They had one way to handle the heat, they started to hurry the children one by one without anyone noticing their plight of work. When the kids started to decrease their families wanted to know where they were sent to, unlike any other cases this took a sensitive turn when the nuns answered them saying they were sent to the Eastern Europe for the sake of safety and they were in safer hands of Christ.

INTRODUCTION :

While the Canadian government choose to ignore the natives and used them as their baits, they also followed the words of the Christ followers, from which they gained more money for converting people. The more people converted into Christians the more the place gained popularity for people to come across and learning for betterment was not an option for them, when the Canadian community and the government turned a blind eye on those who were in need. When the high number of people started to move in for the sake of money into Christianity, even though they had no original intentions regarding it, while being under the influence of Missionaries. They had one goal in life which is to change and convert the entire Native people into the followers of Christ, why no one came to save them was the repeated question, that had no answer across the country, but the natives got easily influenced when they saw how their children were fed in most of the times, this was the major trap they fell intonation. The original people of the land always had a welcoming nature towards the people whomever entered the land. This was setback of the drowning of their whole community.

THE CHANGE OF CANADA :

The common thing between Australian Aborigines and the Canadian people were how they both were taken advantage of the kindness they showed to everyone irrespectively. The White people have no mercy for anyone, they have approximately kidnapped 2,00,000 children and removed them forcefully from their homes, for developing the Christian Population. Their targets were people living in mountains and people living in as they had limited access to a lot of life changing things and they were not able to afford most of it. The narratives are always followed by people crying out about their losses, the families had this intimidate thought of losing themselves into the vague line of default. The first step of the Canadian Missionary was being very warm and welcoming in the first place and no one saw the behaviour, but the backhanded way of scrolling past into the crowd and sea of people who were killed just for the cause of growing their religion and establishing unbelievable and unbreakable bond among each other, when the people went into suffering because of them, all they cared was how much slavery benefitted them. It was free labour and unemployment among the native communities were peaking at that time, when they all had to beg for food and basic needs, the missionaries all across the world came to an agreement and united way of accepting that it is fair to provide basic needs and food for the natives instead of paying them decently. But the natives realised there was no use in focusing on money since all the business were run by the Whites and Europeans in almost all cases. They saw how the blacks were starting to get treated by these people so they also gave up the right to protest. They saw a change of how they are getting treated as animals. First they decided to starve the natives by hunting down every other animal so the entire community starves and accepts the defeat. Many hunters and poachers were awarded hefty bonuses and rewards for hunting and making the people to suffer. The lower they went the more humanity they started to lose, this amount many people suffered and died due to starvation, apart from stealing children they also killed children who did not cooperate for their evil plans.

Many children were taken away and removed from their families, set on the sea towards the East many children found comfort in strangers as they had no one to talk or set their journey with. The losses of families were creating a huge impact on such young children. They never found who their actual parents are, since they try to escape and find the comfort places, this would create a lot stress and struggle for the people to work for cost. When they realised child labour was illegal, they tried to legalise this low act, but when we compare morality and legality they both were made up by them for them and not for protecting the people under them. They more these people got recognised, the more the word spread among themselves as it was more like they found an idea of keeping more money themselves, the lacking self awareness and consciousness was the immediate problem and response which was created.

CONCLUSION :

The only goal was to altar and articulate the people of the country to follow one white religion, the program and system was majorly for the poor and underage children just to attract them. The Wyandot tribe took a major place in the culture of identifying new places to work with, more people came up to rescue them but they all got killed on the long run by the vultures of Christian Missionaries, no matter what happens the show kept going on. These people built everything under no guidance of the government. The gods stood aside and saw all the barbaric behaviour under their barbaric elements. The government aided funds were very promising and yet they tried to overkill and over do everything about themselves, many children were kept under the most toxic and sexual conditions in the case who never made.

The mediocre way of providing support and services for the those in need, the government was an fancy service just for the sake of rich people to escape from the poor.
